

Farm Safety 4 Just Kids' Public Service Announcements

30 Seconds:

September 23rd is Children and Youth Safety Day, part of National Farm Safety and Health Week honoring the hard work and dedication of farmers and ranchers. Farm Safety 4 Just Kids reminds you that children learn safe behavior by watching their parents so drive cautiously on rural roadways. Be patient when following slow moving vehicles, only pass when designated zones are clear of oncoming traffic, and be cautious of blind intersections caused by mature crops. Be a good role model and buckle up every time you get in a vehicle. Farm Safety 4 Just Kids wants you to teach the next generation of farmers to stay alert, aware, and alive on rural roadways.

60 Seconds:

Wednesday, September 23rd is Children and Youth Safety Day, part of the National Farm Safety and Health Week celebration commemorating the hard work and dedication of our nation's farmers and ranchers. Farm Safety 4 Just Kids wants to thank ag producers for feeding the world. You can show your appreciation for their efforts by safely sharing rural roadways, practicing safe driving habits, and teaching your children to do the same. Be patient with farmers moving equipment between fields. Only pass in designated passing zones and be sure there is no oncoming traffic before pulling into the left lane. For you and your children's safety, drive the speed limit. Speeding cars have difficulty slowing down as they rapidly approach a slow moving vehicle and collisions can occur. Be cautious when approaching blind intersections caused by mature crops and never ride or allow passengers in the back of pick-up trucks. Be a good role model for your children and buckle up every time you get in a vehicle. Farm Safety 4 Just Kids wants you to teach the next generation of farmers to stay alert, aware, and alive on rural roadways.
