

NATIONAL FARM SAFETY & HEALTH WEEK

National Farm Safety & Health Week

Agricultural Safety & Health Teaching Tools

Agricultural Safety & Health Program- University of Missouri Extension; is committed to improving the safety, health, and well-being of Missourians involved in rural agricultural living. Extension specialists promote agricultural safety and health providing information and educational programs to help reduce the number of deaths and disabling injuries sustained by persons living or working in rural Missouri. The University of Missouri Extension provides practical, research-based information from the University of Missouri campuses and Lincoln University. Agricultural safety and health displays, factsheets, teaching tools, and videos can be found at <http://agrability.missouri.edu/ruralsafety/index1.asp>.

Ag in the Classroom: Missouri Farm Bureau; Your source for Agricultural Web Quests. The Missouri Farm Bureau has long been a leader in the national Agriculture in the Classroom program. Missouri Farm Bureau and Missouri State University have cooperated in their educational efforts for many years. Their goal is to present agriculturally accurate Web Quests for school classrooms. Additional information about Ag in the Classroom is found at <http://www.mofb.org/AgintheClassroom.aspx>.

Center for Disease Control (CDC) and Prevention, NIOSH Workplace Safety & Health Topic – Agriculture; Contains information specific to agricultural safety and health such as national ag centers, national children ag centers, studies, publications, information on injuries and deaths, machinery, youth ag workers, .
<http://www.cdc.gov/niosh/topics/agriculture/>

Grain Teaching Tools: U. S. Department of Labor, Occupational Safety & Health Administration; OSHA has developed this webpage to provide workers, employers, and safety and health professionals useful, up-to-date safety and health information on grain handling facilities. OSHA grain safety teaching tools can be found at <http://www.osha.gov/SLTC/grainhandling/index.html>.

NASD; the National Ag Safety Database (NASD) is a national repository of agricultural health, safety, and injury prevention materials agriculture community. The publications are contributed by safety specialists in many different states and agencies. NASD contains many kinds of informational materials, including fact sheets, training materials, PowerPoint presentations, video references, and complete on-line videos. To learn more about NASD, visit their website at <http://nasdonline.org/>.

Videos:

Farm Grain Bin Safety Video; The National Corn Growers Association and the National Grain and Feed Foundation – the research and education arm of the National Grain and Feed Association – unveiled a joint video project to promote awareness about grain bin safety on the farm. The grain bin safety video is available at <http://www.ncga.com/> and at www.youtube.com/watch?v=zqbUubNAVE0. It also is being distributed by NCGA to affiliated farm organizations. The NGFA also has made the video available on its website at www.ngfa.org, plus is encouraging its grain elevator members to distribute it to farmer-customers.

Illinois Onsite Safety and Health Consultants; This site offers a variety of downloadable English/Spanish safety and health videos at <http://www2.illinoisbiz.biz/osha/videos/videos1.htm#safety> or single copy of videos, at no cost, can be order by calling 1.800.972.4216.

This and other farm safety and health tips are available at the University of Missouri Extension Rural Safety and Health programmatic website at <http://agrability.missouri.edu/> or by calling 1.800.995.8503.

Contact Person:

Karen Funkenbusch
Rural Safety and Health Specialist
University of Missouri - Columbia
Division of Food Systems and Bioengineering
Department of Agricultural Systems Management Program
232 Agricultural Engineering Building
Columbia, Missouri 65211
573.882.2731 or 1.800.995.8503
funkenbuschk@missouri.edu